

Back in the day was it hard for you to break into the game?

Yeah we saw what it was like first hand and there is a lot of shit that you have to deal with. It was a struggle at first before The Chronic. We were trying to be heard!

Any movies coming out?

I got something called A Woman's Touch that I am going to put out next year and that should be something real good for the women to get into. The ladies are going to love me for that one. Then I am doing an movie for my record called Hood of Horror and that is out now.

Life in the hood is scarier than a movie.

"Oh yeah. Way more scary than a horror movie because in a horror movie, you've got directors telling you cut, action, and you know what the scene will be. In the hood, you don't know what the scene will be and there ain't no director there when the bullets get thrown."

Why do people like Sharpton and the FCC still make trouble for rap music?

I really don't know because hip hop is the most inspirational thing in the world right now and people should just let it be what it is going to be. They got us in everything that is moving right now like movies, TV, commercials, sports, and entertainment. Everything is to be sold has to have hip hop connected to it or it wont sell. That lets me know off the top that we run the world and if you were to take hip hop away from the world right now the world would be boring. Any other music you could take away the world will continue to move but if you take hip hop out of the world shit would just be boring.

Why is it that the USA thinks it can solve other problems with these stupid wars but we ain't doing shit with our own hoods? Afghanistan, Iraq now maybe Iran are these niggaz crazy? They are loco.

Yeah but who cares? If it aint none of your people then who cares? We got to say that it is time to make the war over with! We are fighting a war over there and ain't nobody telling Bush to end that mutha fucka and he keeps sending niggaz over there to get killed. I know a girl who is over there right and I be hitting her on the email on the regular to make sure she is still alive.
