

STILL ARE WARRIORS

BOO YAA TRIBE

Writer: Lil N Photo: Sarinjay

Growing up in Carson City, CA it was the home of the OG Piru West Gang. In this tough neighbourhood you had to bang to survive the Devoux brothers lived the real lifestyle, no studio gangsta shit. The death of their brother Robert “Youngman” Devoux changed how the brothers looked at the gangster lifestyle. “We’d had enough,” said Godfather. When Ridd got out of jail in 1987 I asked him what he wanted to do and he said he wanted to rap. In 1989 New Funky Nation sold over 100,000 and put Boo Yaa into the rap hall of fame to many homies. In 1992 they performed on the Lollapalooza tour and earned instant respect as a crew who could put it down for over fifteen years.
